URGE BETTER LIGHT AS OFFICE ECONOMY

Illuminating Engineers Say Business Men Have Neglected the Subject.

PAPERS READ AT FINAL SESSION OF CONVENTION

"Get-Together" Luncheon Is One of . the Features of Adjournment Day.

Antiquated methods of lighting office buildings were placed on a par with antiquated business methods by speakers at this morning's session of the ninth annual convention of the Illuminating Engineering Society, which this afternoon closed its annual sessions at the New Willard Hotel, following the reading of the last of the forty papers considered by the society dur-ing its four-day sessions.

"The lighting of thirty years ago is as absurd as the business policies of that period applied to present-day business, and although it is sometimes difficult to convince the owners, they are just as much a source of real loss as antiquated business methods," declared Alfred O. Dicker and James J. Kirk in the course of their paper on "Lighting in Downtown Office Buildings," pre-sented before the commercial session of Neglected as Office Asset.

"Proper lighting is now generally considered an essential part of factory equipment and an essential item in the duction of manufacturing cost," continued the paper. "But at present it is not generally accepted among business tinued the paper. "But at present it is not generally accepted among business men as an item in reducing office costs. Data showing the reduction of office cost are difficult to obtain, but few engineers would dispute the statement that the working efficiency of a clerk or stenographer is reduced twenty-five per cent after sundown in a poorly lighted office. This is the period of the day when the workers are tired and it is, therefore, the period during which their comfort and efficiency should be considered."

"The illuminating engineer is by nature attracted to the proposed building rather than to the older one which he passes in his everyday walks of life," continued the paper. "He is desirous of having the dighting in the new building, when completed, typical of the best lighting practice, and in the age of 'tear-down-the-old and build-anew' he has found a large field. Nevertheless, in the older buildings lies annuch larger field of almost untouched harvest. In these, the older buildings, are thousands of workers toiling under lighting conditions typical of the first installations that were made. These lighting systems will soon be changed. They are so old now that either the wiring will be condemned by the various inspection departments, or else the tenants or owners will realize that for their own mercenary benefit more and better light must be provided for their employes."

Cause of Many Accidents. Approximately 25 per cent of the ac occurring in and around industrial plants are due, directly or indirectly, to the lack of proper illumination. Such was the substance of a decla ration made by R. E. Simpson in the course of a paper read this morning on "filumination and One Year's Acci-

Light Effects on Eyes.

The Parabolic Mirror" was the sub-

by the ladies of the party to Mount Vernon..

The reading of two papers, "Yellow Light," by M. Luckiesh, and "Experiments On the Eye With Inverted Refectors of Different Densities," by C. E. Ferree and G. Rand, the report of the committee on the retiring president's address and the report of the committee on resolutions closed the convention late this afternoon.

Washington Finest Capital, better Washington, we feel that Washington not only can be, but will be, the finest capital in the whole world," Maj. C. W. Kutz, Engineer Commissionof the District, told 150 delegates and invited guests at the ninth annual banquet of the Illuminating Engineering Society, held in the large ballroom the New Willard Hotel last night. Interesting data as to the illumination of the National Capital was given by Maj. Kutz. Following praise of the Illuminating Engineering Society and of the work done by it and its mem bers, the Commissioner said: "We were rather discouraged last year, by reason of not securing from Congress additional appropriations for the lighting of the city, but when we contrasted the illumination of the city with the illumination of Washington twenty years ago, we no longer felt downcast.

twenty years ago, we no longer left downcast.

"The Washington of 1895 had less than 7,500 street lights. A 'moonlight' schedule was in effect. Today there are more than 18,000 lights upon our streets, and a goodly proportion of them are of the highest type. Although about 50 per cent of them are gas lights, they are all good gas lights. "In this twenty-year period the population of the city has increased 43 per cent."

Wiereas the lighting facilities have increased 143 per cent."

Maj. Gen. Harries Praised.

Maj. Gen. George H. Harries was toastmaster, and shared the honors of the evening with the various speakers. High tribute to the toastmaster was paid by Clarence P. King, president of the Washington Railway and Electric Company, who said that no man had done more for the advancement of il-

District of Columbia or more generally contributed to the advancement of the District than has Gen. Harries.

One of the features of the evening was the address of Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, consulting engineer of the General Electric Company, and president-elect of the Illuminating Engineering Society. The ovation which greeted Dr. Steinmetz when he arose to speak eloquently testified to the respect and admiration which the members of the society hold for one of the most distinguished of their number.

In humorous style Dr. Steinmetz gave a history of illuminating engineering from the creation to the present day.

Greet Need for the Society.

Great Need for the Society.

"The progress of illuminating engineers has been by leaps and boundsleap every thousand years," he de Dr. Steinmetz said that from 1880 to 1900 there was an increase of 1 per cent in efficiency in illuminating engineering, the next ten years saw a further increase of 1 per cent, until by 1915 an attainment of 4 per cent efficiency had been reached. The remainder, he said, has yet to be attained, so der, he said, has yet to be attained, so that there is still great need of the Illuminating Engineering Society.

The president-elect of the society urged the members to establish another course of lectures on illuminating engineering such as was given at the Johns Hopkins University recently, asserting that that course of lectures had done much for the serious advancement of lighting in the United States.

vancement of lighting in the United States.

The retiring president, Dr. A. S. Mc-Allister, was unable to attend the banquet, as also was E. S. Marlow, chairman of the general convention committee, who has been ill since the opening of the convention Monday. The guests voted to send a letter of sympathy to Mr. Marlow.

Pittsburgh Section Wins Gavel.

At the conclusion of the speechmak ng the prize gavel, which is annually awarded to the section having the best attendance record at the convention, was given into the hands of the Pittsburgh section, amid great protest from the members of the New York section who won the gavel last year, the first year it was awarded. The section first winning the prize three times becomes the permanent owner.
The Chicago, New England, New

York and Philadelphia sections finished in the order named, Washington delegates being included in the count of he Philadelphia section. Washington finishing last with Philadelphia does finishing last with Philadelphia does not mean that the attendance was the smallest, it is pointed out, for the record is based not alone upon the number of section members present, but also upon the traveling distance and total section membership.

C. A. Littlefield, general secretary of the convention, registered a vigorous protest on behalf of the New York section, and was awarded a large tin cup by Toastmaster Harries.

The banquet committee consisted of H. A. Brooks, J. C. McLaughlin, C. L. The banquet committee consisted of H. A. Brooks, J. C. McLaughlin, C. L. Law and M. Luckiesh.

GEN. YOUNG TO ATTEND CAVALRYMEN'S REUNION

Soldiers' Home Governor Commanded Mounted Troops During the Civil War.

One of the first to demonstrate the great value of cavalry in military perations against all arms of the service was Lieut. Gen. S. B. M. Young, U. S. A., retired, now governor of the Na-tional Soldiers' Home in this city. He will be present at the reunion of veteran cavalrymen Friday evening October 1. Gen. Young is the second ranking lieutenant general, standing next to Gen. Miles, who heads the list. "It will afford me great pleasure to meet with the veteran cavalrymen, whose splendid work in our great civil war founded the principles on which cavalry operations, on foot or mounted, against infantry surprised the military students of Europe, even though it requires that were well lighted and therefore, the illumination could have had no bearing on the accident," the speaker ontinued. "It is likewise true that if none of the stairways in the country was provided with light, the accident rate from this cause would be vastly increased."
